He graduated from Rutgers College with the class of 1895.
While at Rutgers he was the originator of the phrase "I'll die for Dear Old Rutgers". The following is from the Rutgers Alumni Monthly for February, 1929 (?) --- "In the Rutgers-Princeton game in 1891 according to the reports of the Rutgers Alumni, the late Frank Kingsley Grant, of the class of '95 was full back on the Scarlet team. While in the center of the old flying wedge formation, Grant sustained a broken leg. Grant, who was older than the average freshman, took his injury stoically, called for a cigarette and remarked: "I'd die to win this game." And this was the origin of the phrase which has since spread from one end of the earth to the other."
After graduating from college he studied law in the offices of the law firm of "Krum and Grant" at Schoharie, N. Y. He started practicing law by himself in Central Bridge, N. Y. In 1903 he moved to Schoharie, N. Y. joining the law firm of "Krum and Grant". On the death of his father in 1906 he took over his father's home "The Maples" and lived there until his death.
He belonged to both the "Odd Fellows" and the "Masons."

A JUNE WEDDING

Grant - Throop

The marriage of Miss Mary Michaels Throop, the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Throop, to Counselor Frank Kingsley Grant, which took place at the home of the bride's parents, in this village, on Friday last, was one of the most notable society events of the year.

The interior of Mr. Throop's spacious residence was handsomely flower bedecked, which with the elegant costumes of the guests made it a scene of beauty.

As one o'clock chimed the guests clustered in the parlors, Miss Maud Grant and Master Harold Throop opened an isle with white ribbons, and the bridge and groom entered to the strains of the wedding march. They were met by their pastor, Rev. W. C. Handy, who gracefully performed the impressive ceremony, the groom placing upon the bride's finger the golden circlet.

Congratulations were showered upon the happy couple, each guest pressing forward to bestow best wishes for their happiness, prosperity and long life.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant then led the way to the dining room. After the guests were confortably settled in the room, on the adjacent porch and canopy shaded lawn, a delicious repast was served by Caterer McElveny of Albany. At its conclusion, the bride cut and distributed the bride's cake.

The bride's costume consisted of a handsome gown of white organdie, over silk, with bridal veil, caught up with sweet peas, held in place by a diamond and pearl sunburst, the gift of the groom. The going-away gown was dark tan cloth, tailor made.

The bride is a most accomplished young woman, possessing a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the country. Mr. Grant, too, is popularly known and is enjoying a very lucrative law business at Central Bridge.

The happy couple are passing the honeymoon at Cottage City, and other seaside resorts. Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Grant will take up their residence at Central Bridge, where a furnished house awaits them, and where they will be at home to their friends after August 1st.

Those present were the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties.

The out-of-town guests were:

Dr. W. O. Throop, Miss Margaret McIntosh, Mt. Vernon, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. George Parrott, Alfred Parrott, Roy Parrott, O Owatonne, Minn.; Mrs. Robt. A. Davidson, New York; Rev. and Mrs. John G. Smart, Cambridge; Mrs. E. V. Vedder, Hartford, Ct.;

Mr. Howard E. Van Ness, Patterson, N. Y.; Miss Mary L. Goodnough, Binghamton; Miss Mabel Wells, Rhinebeck; Miss Anna Pawling, Saratoga Springs; Miss Margery Blue, Richfield Springs; Mrs. I. V. A. Snyder, Miss Anna Hawley, Kinderhook; Mr. and Mrs. Clifford France, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Hutt, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Couch, Miss Ella Shafer, Cobleskill; Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Farquher, Miss Nellie Ottman, Mr. Schermerhorn, Central Bridge.

As the bridal party left accompanied by the happy smiles and parting adieus of relatives and friends, it was unanimously agreed by those left behind that fairer bride, braver groom, happy company or more glorious day could scarce be conceived, and that it would be an occasion to be long borne in remembrance.

An ancient spoon, one of the gifts at the Grant - Throop wedding, was unique and highly prized, a silver tablespoon, a wedding present to Rev. Benjamin and Sybil Throop, the great-great-great-grandparents of the bride, who were married in 1735.

Carolyn Jane, born March 7, 1925. Married Melvin Fox (born November 26, 1913) on April 6, 1950. Their children; Katherine Myra, born March 6, 1952, and Charles Melvin born September 20, 1955.

Mr. Throop attended the local schools and in 1871 he became associated with his father in his store (drug), a business which he continued until his death.

In 1890 he was made a director of the Schoharie County Bank and in 1892 he became its president, which office he held until his death. The crowning achievement of his career as a banker was the erection in 1929 of the imposing and modern bank building which will serve as a monument to him and his associates. He personally supervised the construction of the building and watched with justifiable pride its steady progress to completion.

He served on the Board of Education and was its president for many years. The imposing school building which burned in 1929 was erected during his presidency in 1903.

His church affiliation was with the Reformed church, where he served as an officer in both Sunday School and church. Upon the formation of the Federated church, the original union of the Lutheran, Methodist, and reformed churches, he became its first president. Upon the establishment of the Community church, the successor of the Federated church, he became affiliated with it believing strongly in the principle of union. He served for several terms as President of the American Bible Society in the County.

Historical matters interested him greatly and he took much pride in the traditions of the famous old valley and great credit must be given him for his activity in maintaining the Old Stone Fort as a public museum and in creating its valuable collection of antiques and relics. At his death he was president of the Schoharie County Historical Society. He held the commission of a Captain in the New York State National Guard Company B 108 Regiment.

It may truly be said that he was a native son of Schoharie as he was born and lived all his life in the same residence. The residential and adjoining store properties had been in the Throop family since the year 1800.

He was buried in the Lutheran Cemetery, which cemetery and adjoining church property was donated to the church by one of his ancestors, Johannes Lawyer, who is buried in one of the nearby lots.

After the death of Charles M. Throop his grandson, Charles W. Grant, operated the Throop Drug Store until about 1936. Much of the interior fixtures, equipment, and merchandise was used to furnish and equip the model "Old Time Drug Store" which is a museum exhibit in the Albany Pharmacy College.

O. B. THROOP KILLED

Sad Death of a Prominent Schoharie County Man at the Carylon Disaster -- His Granddaughter Escapes with Slight Injuries-- Her Narrative -- Sketch of Mr. Throop's Life -- Particulars of a Terrible Railroad Calamity.

At noon Saturday last it was reported at Cobleskill and neighboring villages that Origen B. Throop of Schoharie had been killed. A telephone message from Schoharie to Cobleskill confirmed the report and caused much sadness. The deceased left Schoharie June 9 with his granddaughter, Mary M. Throop, aged 12 years, and visited his sister, Mrs. S. L. Fish, at Cedarville, Herkimer County, and relatives in Oneida County. They were two days at Niagara Falls, and Friday evening took a Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburgh train for Clayton, on the St. Lawrence river, intending to go by boat to the Thousand Islands and return by way of Montreal, reaching Schoharie August 4. Mary M. Throop made the following statement to a Herald reporter concerning the terrible accident which happened to their train at Carylon.

Mary Throop's Statement

"We were riding backward when the accident happened. The car was full of people, every berth being taken. Grandpa said 'We better have the berths made ready. I'm tired, ain't you?' I said I was. Then we heard a crash and two jars followed. The next thing I knew I was on my hands and knees in the aisle and grandpa lay on his back in the aisle dead. The sides of the car had been knocked in. The lights were burning and I saw an unoccupied berth near me. I crawled into it and stayed there a few minutes until some men came along. I told them to help my grandfather, and they looked at him and said he was dead. I asked the men if it was not all a dream. I was taken to a farm house and taken care of."

A Sad Message

Saturday morning, about 10 o'clock Charles M. Throop, son of deceased, received the following dispatch at Schoharie, from Knowlersville, a station near Carylon where the accident occurred. The dispatch brought the first news of the disaster.

C. M. Throop:- Your father killed last night at Carylon. Daughter unhurt. Communicate with her there.

S. M. Weed.

The Remains Brought Home

The sender of the dispatch, ex-Senator Smith M. Wee, of Plattsburgh, was on the train, but escaped unhurt. Charles M. Throop left Schoharie at noon, Saturday, and arrived at Carylon at 2 o'clock Sunday morning. The daughter had sent the body of her grandfather to Albion with directions to have the body embalmed, and the directions were followed. Mr. Throop and his daughter arrived at Albion at 6 a.m. They started homeward at 9:55 Sunday morning with the body, arrived at Schenectady at 5 o'clock, where a hearse and carriages from Schoharie were waiting. The following in carriages followed the body in a hearse from Schenectady to Schoharie, where they arrived at midnight: Charles M. Throop and daughter, Freeman W. Settle, clerk in Mr. Throop's store, Walter Ferris and Lucius Vroman of Schoharie.

Mr. Throop's Injuries

A wound in Mr. Throop's back just above the hip and towards the right side is believed to have caused his death. The skin was torn from the top of his head and his clothing was torn to shreds. The deceased sat next to the window and doubtless received his death wound from a fragment of the side of the car. The side was broken into small pieces. Mr. Throop and his granddaughter occupied the forward sleeper.

Mr. Throop's Funeral

When the body of the deceased was prepared for burial Monday, it was swollen so the friends did not exhibit it afterwards. The funeral occurred from the late residence of the deceased Tuesday afternoon. The attendance was so large many were unable to enter the house. Rev. A. F. Todd, of the Schoharie Reformed Church, officiated, assisted by the Rev. E. W. Delk, of the Lutheran church of Schoharie. The floral offerings were very beautiful. A sheaf and floral sickle was the touching gift of Albany friends. The bearers were Hiram Schoolcraft, S. P. Sweet, H. R. Brown, William Gaige, M. L. Shaeffer, Jacob Marsh and Alexander Rickert. The interment was at Schoharie.

The Daughter's Injuries

Mary M. Throop, a bright child, received severe bruises and cuts on the left knee and on the right leg. Her legs are badly swollen and purple but a serious result of her hurts is not probable. She was kindly attended to by Mr. and Mrs. S. Newnham, of Carylon, and ex-Senator S. M. Weed.

Origen Brigham Throop

Origen B. Throop was 66 years old and was born in the house in which he lived until his death. His father, Jabez W. Throop, came from Bozrah, Conn., in 1800, and founded the store at Schoharie which his son, the deceased, conducted 38 years, and of which Chas. M. Throop is now proprietor. Origen B. Throop accumulated a competency and was widely known and highly esteemed. His wife died nearly two years ago. He had but one child, Charles M. Throop. The deceased had been in mercantile business in Schoharie county 38 years, longer it is said than any other resident of the county.

A Sensational Report

It has been reported that an attempt was made to make away with valuables on Mr. Throop's body. Mary M. Throop says a youth offered to assist her and take care of her grandfather's effects. She surrendered Mr. Throop's watch and other articles to the stranger, but upon the advice of ladies asked the stranger to return the property, which he promptly did. The railroad company notified Charles M. Throop Wednesday that they would recover his father's and his daughter's baggage, which had been forwarded according to checks.

Place of the Accident

The accident occurred at the flag station on the Oswego and Niagara Falls Division of the road known as Carylon, 30 miles west of Charlotte, and almost directly north of the village of Albion, on the Falls branch of the Central railroad. The train was the steam-boat express, which runs regularly between Niagara Falls and Cape Vincent, and frequently draws from seven to ten sleeping cars, filled with Thousand Island excursionists from the west. Friday night it consisted of eight sleeping cars, one regular coach, a smoking car and baggage car, and was drawn by two locomotives, engines Nos. 61 and 51.

A Terrible Scene

A furious gale was blowing and rain was falling in torrents. The train was going at the rate of 35 or 40 miles an hour. It was not marked to stop at Carylon, and there was no one to warn the engineer of any danger. A box car had been left on the siding, and this car was started by the wind and blown down and upon the main track, so that it stood upon an angle, half on and half off the track. The express train struck the car and the terrible wreck which followed was the result. The crash was heard by persons living near, above the storm, and they rushed out of doors to behold nothing, but to hear groans and cries for help. The front engine was flung from the track on the north side, while the one following left the rails of the south side, and, turning around parallel with the train, literally made a somersault, landing in the ditch with its trucks in the air, with escaping volumes of smoke and steam coming from it. The baggage car was jerked after it and tossed as if only a tail of a kite on top of the locomotive. The smoking car, which followed was torn from the rails and dashed into a thousand splinters. The scene was indescribable. The first sleeper kept on the track, although it was hurled from the trucks, and the sides and ends were smashed in. It was completely flattened out. The second sleeper was telescoped half upon it and left its trucks and the track. The third left its forward trucks and mounted the wreck, but stood on its rear trucks and was not demolished.

Under and around the wreck could be seen heads and arms, and men and women were calling for help in piteous cries. For a wonder the engineer and fireman on the pilot engine were not seriously injured. Engineer McCarthy, one of the best on the road, was terribly scalded, and his death was a question of only a few hours. Fireman Lucius France was instantly killed, his body being scarcely recognizable. W. H. Chauncey, train-master of the road, sat upon the fireman's side of the engine, and is among the injured, but notwithstanding his wounds he superintended the work of rescuing the victims.

The Work of Relief

A wrecking gang was at once sent out from Oswego, and also from Lewiston, and the work was commenced of getting out the killed and wounded. Surgeons were sent from Oswego and also from Rochester. Those of the injured who could travel were placed in a sleeper and taken to the Falls, while the rest were taken to the neighboring houses and cared for. One man, who lives only a few rods from the wreck, had driven his son to Lyndonville, a distance of three miles, to take the train, and got home just in time to find him a corpse. The work of removing the debris was being pushed forward very rapidly, and the track was cleared in a few hours.

The Inquest

At the inquest James Bailey, engineer of the first locomotive, testified that he first saw the car about three rods ahead. He blew for brakes and reversed the engine, and the next thing he knew he was in the ditch. Albert Perry, a track-walker, testified that he went over the track about half an hour before the collision and everything was all right, and yet it seems from other testimony that a freight car was blown 128 feet, with the brakes set, as testified by a brakeman. The depot-master says he did not examine or look to see if everything was all right. The testimony of the witnesses was conflicting, and the jury, unable to agree upon a verdict, adjourned until Wednesday.

The Management Censured

The coroner's jury gave a verdict, Wednesday, censuring the railroad management.

MRS. FRANCES M. PARROTT, WIDOW OF EDITOR, DIES

- - - - - - -

Prominent in Church, Club and Literary Circles; 86 years of age.

- - - - - - -

Mrs. Frances M. Parrott, 86, widow of Matt Parrott, long the editor of the Waterloo Reporter and lieutenant governor of Iowa, died at 8 a.m. today at her home, 415 Third Street east, of ailments due to advanced age. She had been in failing health for several months.

Mrs. Parrott was prominent in church, club and literary circles of Waterloo, for many years. She assisted in the organization of the Women's Club and of Christ Episcopal church parish.

She was a great traveler, and with her husband, had visited many remote sections of the world, as well as all parts of America.

Writer of Note

Mrs. Parrott was a writer of statewide note and in the early days endeared herself to thousands of women in the rural districts by articles published under the caption of "Aunt Lucy's talks". Stories of her travels, both written and spoken, were much in demand. She was a member of the Waterloo library board for many years.

Frances Marie Field was born at Ypsilanti, Michigan, September 19, 1841. With her parents, she removed to Davenport, Iowa, in 1856. On October 25, 1859, she was married, at Davenport, to Matthias Parrott. He was a printer at the time.

To Waterloo in 1869

In 1869 the family, then consisting of two boys, William F. and Louis G. moved to Waterloo, where Mr. Parrott purchased the Iowa State Reporter, later to become the Waterloo Daily Reporter. James S. and Kate were born in Waterloo, of the four children, two survive, William F. and James S. Parrott, Matt Parrott, the husband, died April 21, 1900. The only daughter died in infancy August 19, 1878, and Louis G. died in February, 1911.

Mr. Parrott, in the course of years, became prominent in the affairs of the city and state. He was mayor of the city, state senator and lieutenant gouvernor. At the time of his death he was president of the National Editorial Association.

Funeral services will be Thursday at 2 p.m. in Christ Episcopal church, Rev. Ernest B. Mounsey officiating. Burial will be in Fairview.

The body is at the O'Keefe and Towne mortuary.

The following was copied from an old newspaper clipping --

"William Parrott, Sen., one of the oldest residents of Schoharie, died this, Wednesday, morning, at his residence, on Sunny Side. Deceased was born in England, and came to this country at an early age and took up his residence in this village, where he engaged in different pursuits, the principal one being the proprietor of the old Eagle Hotel. About 1866 he retired from the hotel business and moved on his farm, where he resided up to the time of his death. His widow and several children survive him. His eldest son is at present editor of the Waterloo (Iowa) Reporter. Mr. Parrott was a man of strict business integrity, and was known and respected throughout the county. He was 78 years of age.

Mrs. David Chapman says that her Grandmother Grant (Margaret Grant, 17) lived with her son William (8) and rest of time with her son, George, who lived at Oak Hill. She died while living with George and she is sure she is buried at Oak Hill.

WILLIS N. GRANT

Willis N. Grant of Kansas City, Mo., is visiting his cousin, Mrs. May Southard here and other relatives in various parts of the state. Mr. Grant holds the longest postal record of active service of any employee in the first, second and third class post offices in the United States. One postmaster in a fourth class office in New Jersey exceeds Mr. Grant's record by six years. Mr. Grant entered the service in 1873 and completed 56 years of service before he retired on a pension last year. He was presented with a hand tooled Russian leather memento by the National Association of Postal Supervisors and the Postmaster of Kansas City, which is a rare piece of work beautifully executed.

Historical Novel: "The Little Red Foot," by Robert Chambers.
Peggy Grant is one character.

JEMIMA (VAN BUSKIRK) BATES (19). Married at Athens. (Go to Mackey's and Safford's Corners)

Her second husband was a brother of Sallie (Clapper) Kingsley (21). They had a son, Peter Henry.

The brother was married before he married Jemima Bates (19). By his first wife he had three sons, Philip, Henry, and Sylvester.

Jemima's (19) mother (39) was English. She was kidnapped and brought to America as a slave, per Harriet Grant Chapman.

Children:

Harriet (9).

John. Who married and lived in Alton, Ill. He had two children John and Hannah, who married and are living in St. Louis, Mo.

Lawrence and Russell. One of these was a M. E. minister.

Sallie. The Finks took Sallie. Went to Erie (?) Penn. where she married into the Fink family.

There were two more children.

Gravesend, N. Y., Nov. 17, 1894.

Mrs. J. B. Grant,

Dear Madam:

I am in receipt of your letter of inquiry regarding Jemime Van Buskirk and I wish I could give you some favorable news concerning her connection with our family. But I have no knowledge of any such person being any relative of your family although it is quite a large one on New Jersey. My grandfather died in 1879 in his 92nd year and he had three brothers and survived them all, but they were all Jersey men and resided in either Bergen or Hudson Counties in that state. We are of the pure Holland blood, could easily trace our ancestry back to the Revolution, and I ought to belong to the Holland society of New York but I have never sought membership in that organization and up to this time have had very little concern about our geneology. I think your friend must be from another family, though she may have been a descendent from some remote branch of our family away back before my time.

I am very respectfully,

P. V. VanBuskrik

In 1796 Jabez W. Throop came from Connecticut, and worked as a mechanic until the year 1800, when he commenced upon a very limited scale, to "keep store." By careful and honest dealing he established a trade that is still retained by his son, O. B. Throop, after a lapse of seventy-nine years. It is an example of perseverance and stability in business that is very seldom witnessed or experienced. Through all the changes that have been brought about within that time--financial reverses of less and more pretentious concerns, and brighter prospects of gain in other places--this house has kept steadily on, outliving the long list of those we have mentioned, upon the same ground that the humble store of 1800 was built.

Another former merchant of the place deserves mention. Peter Osterhout, Sr., came to Schoharie about the year 1820, and commenced upon a limited capital. By strict attention to business and honest dealing he soon enlarged his stock and trade, and became, as did Mr. Throop, one of the leading merchants of the County. It was thought for many years, that an article that could not be found at either Osterhout's or Throop's was not to be found anywhere. Mr. Osterhout died on the 8th of March, 1872, at the advanced age of eighty-two.

Letter dated February 1843, Hammersmith, (William?) Smith in writing to his Uncle (14) refers to one of Aunt Coopers' boys, "He was christened after your father Mathias."

Letter dated February 9, 1851, Buckland, England, Charlotte Turner writes to her brother (14), "Mother is surprisingly well for her age eighty one on last New Years day."
Also, "Betsey's address is Mrs. Morse, Horns Lane, Haversford, West Wales."

Among the letters was an auction notice to dispose of 4 houses and 2 cottages, in Brentford, of Mrs. Charlotte Parrott deceased, to be sold June 18, 1851.

The names of the children was obtained from the letters.

4 - 24 - 32.

William Parrott's father died when he was 12 years old.
William went to work in a bakery in London when he was 12 years old so he remained there and learned the trade.
His mother had property in London.
His mother died March 20, 1851, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Turner.
Three sisters and one brother are mentioned in letters (names not known).
Mrs. Charlotte Turner settled her mothers estate.
The address of latter was Buckland, England.
These places were mentioned in letters; Havesford, West Surry, Brompton.

Think Mr. William Parrott had a cousin named George. May have had brother named Thomas, who died of consumption.
Think William Parrott's fathers name was Mathias or else it was a brother.

- - - - - - - - - - - - -

The above was in a letter from mother with the following comments:

> I am sending however a paper that Aunt Ella (Ella Sidney Parrott) gave me, but there is some of it I do not seem to be able to work out. It says "His mother died, March 20, 1851, at the home of her daughter Mrs. Charlotte Turner." Now on the little (black) picture in the dining room it is written on the back, "England 1820, Charlotte Turner Parrott, mother of William Parrott Sr."

The letters borrowed from George Parrott verify the paper from Aunt Ella.

WHO ARE YOU?
a GRANT? 1634246

The Romance of Your Name
by Ruby Haskins Ellis

This surname was taken from the old Saxon word grant, which meant crooked or bowed; or else the French grand, meaning great or valorous; or perhaps the Irish grant (or ciar), which had the same meaning as the Saxon grant. In the Irish the letter d was sounded quickly, and consequently the spelling was finally changed to grant.

The first person of great prominance of this name was perhaps Richard Grant, who was made Archbishop of Canterbury in 1229.

One of the first settlers in America by the name of Grant was Matthew, who came from Devonshire, England, in 1630 on the good ship Mary and John, bringing with him his wife, Priscilla and infant daughter, also the New World, and after a voyage of seventy days they arrived at Nantasket.

Matthew Grant first settled in Dorchester, but later removed to Windsor, Conn., where he became the first surveyor of the town and also served as town clerk.

General Ulysses Simpson Grant, famed in Civil War days and as President of the United States, was the eighth lineal descendant of Matthew Grant. He was the son of Jesse Root Grant, born in Westmoreland, Pa. The Grants moved with the great tide of Western emigration, and General Grant was born in Point Pleasant, Ohio. His mother was Hannah Simpson and throughout the Simpson line it is said that the same blood flowed in both the great general and Jefferson Davis.

There were a number of other Grants who settled in America at an early period, especially in New England. Among them were Alexander, Peter and James (it is not known if they were related) who were among the founders of the Scots Charitable Society of Boston in 1657.

Caleb Grant, a mason, located at Watertown, Mass., in 1670; Christopher, a glover, born in England, 1608, settled in Watertown, Mass., 1634; Edward, a shipwright, married in Boston, 1658; James was a resident in Charlestown, Mass., 1658, and took the oath of allegiance at York, Me., 1681; another James was a resident of Dedham, Mass., 1664; Robert lived in Ipswich, Mass., 1625, Seth lived in Hartford, Conn., 1647.

The arms given were found on a topaz seal belonging to Patrick Grant.

The above clipping was in the "New York Times" and the "Saturday Post" during November, 1930.

Durham, Jan. 2, 1885

Mrs. Augusta Grant,

Dear Cousin:-

Your letter of Inquiry was received Christmas evening. We have failed to find anyone who has ever heard of Reuben Hill or his wife Cathatine Overpaugh. Have asked every one who would be likely to know and have consulted Historical sketches of the town but cannot find the name. No such difficulty in the case of Mr. Platt Adams, his father was Joseph or Joe Adams, a farmer at Cornwallsville in the southern part of this town. He married Miss Clarissa Dudley, who was the daughter of Mrs. William Williston, the wife of the minister in the place at that time. They had four children:- Addison, who left the place when a young man, Grosvener, who married Nancy Cone, the daughter of a later minister, Frances who married a Jennings from Freehold, who turned out a worthless fellow, who failed to support her and her father took her home. The Jennings had two children. The youngest daughter, Emily, is the only one of the family of Platt Adams who is living. I could not learn her married name but she is living in New York and her father died at her home only a few years ago, a very old man. I could not find out anything about any other grandchildren or anything of the Jennings, save the fact of their existence at one time.

Grosvenor lived on Long Island and Addison at some Norwish. Mr. Adams moved from here to New York, where he became a broker in Wall Street. His half-brother, Seymour Adams, spent his life in Cairo, he recently died and I think his family have all gone from there to Jefferson in this county or to Catskill.

Should you wish to hear further of the family you could probably learn all you wish to from the sons, Ed, or Will, or the daughters.

With kind regards,
Yours sincerely,
Orville J. Prior.

MRS. KENDALL'S 100th BIRTHDAY

- - - - - - - - -

New Lebanon Woman Will Celebrate Event Tomorrow.

- - - - - - - - -

Mrs. Deborah Avery Kendall of New Lebanon, N. Y., widow of John Kendall will celebrate tomorrow her 100th birthday anniversary within a few miles of where she was born. Relatives and friends will gather from far and near to extend their congratulations.

Mrs. Kendall will be able to receive them all, for Father Time has been kind to her; she reads without glasses; she goes out driving; yes, even riding in an automobile. Only yesterday she took her premiere ride in an auto car with her grand nephew, Lawyer Lee Meriweather of St. Louis, who has come on to New Lebanon to help celebrate the birthday anniversary.

No other event of recent years has pleased Mrs. Kendall so much as that ride in the automobile over the hills and through the valley of New Lebanon.

With the exception of a slight defect in her hearing Mrs. Kendall's faculties are unimpaired. Half a century ago she had to wear spectacles; later her second sight came and how she reads the Bible, magazines and newspapers with as much avidity as a young student. Thus she keeps abreast of the times and converses entertainingly of current events.

Remembers Gen. Lafayette.

Possessed of a very retentive memory Mrs. Kendall can easily recall the stirring events of th war of 1812, although she was then but six years old. She remembers the time Gen. Lafayette marched triumphantly through Western Massachusetts and Eastern New York.

Patriotism has ever been a dominant characteristic of Mrs. Kendall's family. Her ancesters fought gallantly in the Revolution and the war of 1812. In the Battle of Groton Heights were 15 of her relatives, nine of whom were killed.

Her First Trolley Ride.

Four years ago, when the Berkshire street railway line was opened Mrs. Kendall came over to Pittsfield for a ride. Like a school girl out for a picnic she enjoyed that trip and it was as much of a novelty to her as the voyage in the automobile of yesterday.

In this connection it is of interest to note that last year a Sheffield man, 65 years old enjoyed his first trip on a trolley car over the Berkshire road.

Drove to Galesburg, Ill.

You sit up and listen when Mrs. Kendall tells of the 1,000 mile journey across the country to Galesburg, Ill., which she and her husband and oldest child took in 1836. There were perils in such a trip but they made it safely in five weeks. They were accompanied by Mrs. Kendall's brothers on horseback. Mr. Kendall was owner of the site of Knox college, which was bought up for the institution.

Wonderful progress has been made in the march of civilization during the span of Mrs. Kendall's life. She has seen the development of steam railroads, electric railways, electric lights, balloons, flying machines, automobiles, etc., etc., and her story existence without these necessities and luxuries is really entertaining.

Her Distinguished Ancestry.

Mrs. Kendall comes of distinguished ancestry.

She was born in New Lebanon, N. Y., August 31st, 1806. Her parents, William Thomas Avery and Phebe Throop, went to that town on horseback from Lebanon, Conn., in 1791. Among her Colonel ancestors are Christopher Avery who came from Salisbury, Eng., with Governor Winthrop in 1631; Rev. Peter Bulpley, first pastor at Concord, Mass.; President Chauney of Harvard college; Jonathan Brewster of New Lebanon; William Thomas of Plymouth Colony, who assisted Edward Winslow in fitting out the Mayflower. William Hyde who first came to Hartford and was afterward one of the original propietors of Norwich; Hugh Calkins, an original propietor of Norwich. She was also a relative by marriage of Benedict Arnold and Nathan Hale.

Back to French Wars.

Her grandfather, Nathan Avery and William Throop, both of Lebanon, Ct., served in the Revolutionary war, while her great-great-grandfather, Captain James Avery, served throughout the Indian wars and her great-great-grandfather, Col. Eliphalet Dwyer, served in the early French wars and afterward represented the Susquehannah company at the Court of Great Britain.

Mrs. Kendall survives seven brothers and sisters, Dr. Nathan Avery of Nashville and Memphis, Tenn., Mrs. Silas Churchill of New Lebanon, Hyde Throop, William Thomas and George Avery, original settlers of Galesburg, Ill., Rev. John Thomas Avery of Cleveland, Ohio, and Mrs. Cornelius Ball of Lee, Mass.

Married in 1832.

In 1832 she married John Kendall of New Lebanon and in 1836 they emigrated to Illinois where Mr. Kendall was one of the original settlers of Galesburg and founders of Knox college. The trip from New Lebanon, N. Y., to Galesburg was made entirely by wagon as few steam railroads were running at that time.

Mrs. Kendall's Ancestry.

Mr. Kendall was likewise of Colonial extraction, numbering among his ancestors Francis Kendall of Woburn; Ezekiel Cheever, head master of the Boston Latin school; Richard Waters and William Plaise, famous gunmakers of Salem; Henry Crane of Dorchester; James Leonard and Thomas Gilbert of Taunton; Governor William Bradford of Plymouth Colony.

His great-grandfather, Col. Thomas Gilbert, served at Louisburg and Crown Point and his grandfather, Rev. Thomas Kendall, served as chaplain of the famous Knox artillery regiment of the Continental troops. Mr. Kendall's grandfather, Lemuel Crane, served at Lexington and Dorchester Heights.

After remaining 12 years in the West Mr. and Mrs. Kendall returned to New Lebanon in 1848 where she has since made her home. Mr. Kendall died about 15 years ago. Mrs. Kendall has three daughters living, Mrs. E. C. Clark of New Lebanon, Miss E. C. Kendall of New Lebanon, and Mrs. S. W. Kendall Brown, 81 Appleton Avenue, Pittsfield. She has several grandchildren.

Reception Tomorrow.

Friends of Mrs. Kendall are invited to call upon her tomorrow afternoon between 3 and 6 o'clock. A number of relatives and friends from distant cities have called within the past week to extend their congratulations and best wishes. Among them have been Rev. Fred B. Avery, Mr. and Mrs. George Avery of Cleveland, O., Mr. and Mrs. David Wolcott Kendall of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. Lee Meriweather, Miss Mary Lamb, St. Louis, Mo.; Charles H. Brown, Dunkirk, N. Y.; Mrs. W. S. Kendall Brown, Howard Payson Brown, Mts. F. P. Farrington, Pittsfield; Miss Laura D. Stockwell, Oxford, Mass.; Miss Marjorie Clinton, Rochester, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Hutchinson, New York.

HEZEKIAH KINGSLEY 160.

ELIZABETH (THOMAS) KINGSLEY 161.

The Kingsley Coat of Arms, which is here reproduced, and which will be used as a cover decoration, was originally traced in vellum for the novelist's grandfather by the College of Heralds. The shield in the centre is that of the Haddington family. Charles Kingsley could have been Earl of Haddington had he desired, but assuming the title would have involved a costly chancery suit; the family, who have ever been democratic in their ideas, decided to remain Kingsleys. The hunting horn is only used by the head of the family, the others all using a fifth ermine in its place.

Mr. Charles M. Throop,
Schoharie, N. Y.

Dear Sir:

On Thanksgiving Day, my brother, Charles M. Throop, was at my home and brought a letter which he had received from you in 1922. He knows that I have been looking up the family history and thought that I might want to write to you about it. Hency my taking the liberty of writing to you.

I am just wondering if you have found out much about the history of the Throop Family. It is a wonderfully interesting and I have been getting the biggest kick out looking it up, I have not only looked up the Throop family but all the branches off from it that relate in any way to our family and have been happy to find a Mayflower Ancestor in Richard Warren.

You can find a wonderful account of the Throop Family and the Scrope Tradition in Vol. 35 and 36 of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record and then you can send a $1.00 to the American Historical Society, Inc., Somerville, New Jersey, and get the copy of the American Magazine, Vol. 22 for the Fourth Quarter, No. 4, of 1928 and it has a fine copy of part of the Throop Family, and also shows the coat of arms. It is a very interesting account and may help you very much as it gives about the son William, and the Grandson, William, and so may help you.

Our family comes down through William Throop, his son Dan Throop, his son Joseph, his son Benjamin, his son Samuel, his son Joseph, his son Samuel, who was my father.

I am just wondering what your middle name is. My brother's is Mason. I noticed there were Charles in the account of the family in Vol. 35 and 36 of the New York Genealogical Record.

Our ancestors settled in Lebanon and Litchfield, Conn. and then my greatgrandfather, Samuel Throop went to Canada and my Grandfather and my Father were born there. Later my Father moved to Elkart, Ind. and lived there until his death in 1917, and that is where my Brother, Sister and myself were born. My Brother and I live in Chicago now and my sister in Iowa.

If you have not already found some information about the family I am sure that you can find much of interest in the books I have listed for you. I will enjoy hearing about your family and will be glad to give you any information that I can.

Very sincerely,

Mabel L. Van Dyke.

THROOP

Coat of Arms

Arma - Gules, a fesse between two chevrons, argent.

Crest - An arm embowed fesseways holding a snake, all proper.

Motto - Debita Facere. (They did their duty).

While no actual and incontrovertible proof exists of the fact William Troop, founder of the American family of that name was son of Adrian Scroope one of the regicide judges of Charles I, tradition has long affirmed it and every evidence substantiates it.

The Scroope tradition is based on an old family record of a daughter of Rev. Benjamin Throop, who states that her father was the seventh child of Captain William Throop, who was the third son of William Throop, whose father, "Lord Scroope of Scotland," "in one of the Scotch rebellions" fled to America and assumed the name of Throop. ---Colonel Adrian Scroope was governor of Bristol Castle in 1649. He served on the High Court of Justice that condemned King Charles I, and signed his death warrant.

When Charles II, ascended the throne of England he demanded the execution of the judges who had condemned his royal father. As an unrepentant regicide, the elder Scroope was excepted out of the Act of Indemnity and executed at Charing Cross, London in 1660. The son escaped to America in the same year, settling at Hartford, where it appears he was first known by his proper name, but later assumed the alias William Throop, because of the further safety which it afforded.

History of Bristol, R. I. Page 92.

William Throop came to Bristol in 1680. His descendants used to relate with much pride theparticulars of his triumphal entrance into the town. He made the journey by team. He loaded all his household goods into an oxcart, placed his family thereon, and with stately grandure and amid the plaudits of envious but admiring spectators, moved onward to the spot which he had determined for his habitation.

REV. HENRY WHITFIELD 1562.

WILLIAM BRADFORD, GOV. 1564.

born - 1589 (?)
died - May 9, 1657.
married - August 14, 1623.

ALICE (CARPENTER)BRADFORD 1565.

born -
died - 1670.

He was baptized March 19, 1589.

The date of Bradford's birth is not definitely known and is variously estimated from 1588 to 1590. He gave the age of 23 at the time of his first marriage in 1613. He was 32 when first chosen Governor 1621 and Mather says he was 69 at the time of his death in 1657. He was probably born about 1589.

He left England and arrived in Holland in 1609.

He married first Dorothy May at Leyden, Holland, on November 15, 1613. She fell overboard from the Mayflower and was drowned while the Mayflower was at Cape Cod in December, 1620.

He married second, Mrs. Alice Carpenter Southworth, widow, on August 14, 1623. She was the daughter of Alexander Carpenter and was the widow of Edward Southworth. She had several brothers and sisters in Plymouth before she came over from Leyden, Holland.

With the exception of 5 years, he was Governor of the Plymouth Colony from April 1621 to 1657, the time of his death.

WILLIAM BRADFORD

William Bradford for 31 years Governor of Plymouth Colony, son of William and Alice (Hanson) Bradford, was baptized at Austerfield in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England, March 19, 1589. He was a thoughtful, studious boy and as Scrooby was but two miles distant a fellowship sprang up between Brewster and this serious youth who was but 18 years old when the immigration to Holland took place. To support himself while at Leyden he apprenticed himself to a fustian weaver. He was married there November 30, 1613 to Dorothy May of "Witzbuts" (Wisbeach?) England, who accompanied him in the Mayflower, but was drowned while the ship lay at Provincetown Harbor December 7, 1620. His name is the second in the signing of the Compact. After the death of John Carver, April, 1621, Bradford was chosen to succeed him as Governor an office which he filled with but 5 years intermission until his death. His second wife, married August 14, 1623, was Mrs. Alice (Carpenter) Southworth, who came in the "Anne" in that year.

In 1627 he joined with 7 others in purchasing the colonial rights from the Merchant Adventurers. In addition to his official duties, in which he was unselfishly faithful to the best interests of the struggling colony, he found time for study, for much c correspondence and for writing his invaluable history "Of Plimoth Plantation." In the relations of the colony, with its neighbors, and well as with its friends and enemies at home and abroad, he displayed a worthy dignity, much tact, no little shrewdness and wordly wisdom mingled with a becoming peity and sound business judgment. He died May 9, 1657.

SCHOHARIE.

The Early Settlement of the Schoharie Valley - Stubborness of the Dutch Settlers - Old-Time Schools and Churches - Beauties of the Schoharie Valley - Its Present Business and Social Aspects.

- - - -

The original meaning of Schoharie appears upon the best authority to be "drift" or "flood wood" and from this it has acquired the signification of a "carrying over." About half a mile above the Middleburgh Bridge two small streams run into the river opposite to each other. One is called the Line Kill, the other Stony Creek. Falling into the Schoharie at that place a counter current was produced, which caused a lodgment of drift wood, and by these means a natural bridge was formed by which the Indians crossed from one side to the other; hence the two meanings, both of which seem applicable.

The Aborigines were the first inhabitants of the Schoharie Valley, although it is not known at what time they were first located. The first known settler was Ka-rigon-don-tee, a French Indian prisoner, who had taken unto himself a squaw from among the Mohawks, but did not consider his life safe among his wife's relatives, and receiving a portion of the Schoharie flats from his father-in-law he settled there and was afterwards joined by families from the Mohawk, Mohegan, Tuscarora, Delaware, and Oneida tribes. A new tribe was formed and he was created chief.

About the year 1711 some six or seven hundred High and Low Dutchmen landed in Albany and found their way to Schoharie Valley. They left the country of their nativity to dwell on the soil of freedom, where they could hold their religious opinions, "none daring to make them afraid", and they were promised grants of land by Queen Anne. Strong, sturdy, laborious men and women they were, ready to grapple with any difficulties so that they could secure homes of freedom and religious liberty. On their way from Albany they crossed the Helderbergh, as it is now called, giving it the more euphonious name of "Hellebergh" or "clear mountain," and there is a small stream a short distance from the present village of Schoharie which still bears record of their doings by the way. Men, women, and children halted here for the purpose of cleansing themselves, which appears to have been abundantly necessary, as the stream was dubbed Lousekill and has since borne that name in consequence of the number of living creatures that floated down the stream after their ablutions.

These pioneers had little to boast of in the way of fire-arms, but were well accoutred with forks, shovels, broad hoes, axes, poles, clubs and hand-saws. On their first view of the valley they were all charmed with its location, fertility and beauty, and resolved to make it their home. They set to work in good earnest, and divided themselves into tribes, each having a head man. At first they were almost without, we should consider, the necessaries of life; all their furniture was home-made, and their diet consisted principally of ground nuts; they had no beasts of burden, and men and women alike had to share the toils of the field in a strange land, a new climate, and with Indian neighbors, though it should be said of the latter that they were most friendly in their conduct and useful in their counsel, as well as generous in their assistance.

Though possession had been taken of the land, no specified grants had been made to any of these settlers, and, in 1714, Nicholas Bayard, an agent from the British Crown, made his appearance, and generously offered to give a deed in the name of his sovereign to every householder who would give him particulars of the boundaries of his territory. The Germans altogether mistook the purport of this offer, and thought it was designed as a means of extortion, and that Bayard was a foe instead of a friend to their interest. Thinking thus, they resolved to demonstrate their feelings by their actions. The men armed with guns and pitchforks, and the women with broad hoes, surrounded the house where the crown agent put up, and demanded his body dead or alive. The landlord of the hotel (for such it was) refused to comply with this demand, and, after the crowd had spent their fury, they returned to their homes; Bayard wisely considered discretion the better part of valor, and, under cover of the shades of night, escaped to Schenectady, thence to Albany, and doubtless somewhat piqued at his abominable treatment, he granted patents for the land to men outside the place.

These men called on the Germans to take leases of land, purchase or quit. Being ignorant of legal matters, and having unlimited confidence in Queen Anne, they refused to comply, and the consequence was that Sheriff Adams was despatched from Albany to arrange matters. Poor Adams was very inhospitably received. He was taken in hand by a mob consisting principally of the ladies of the community, and headed by one Magdalen Zeh, he was made to ride a rail, dragged through the mud, and submitted to atrocious indignities; he was, however, allowed to escape with his life, and managed to make his way back to Albany, where he recorded his recent experiences, giving visible evidence of his bodily afflictions. As might be supposed, the Schoharie burghers were not over anxious to visit Albany after recent events; but after they thought sufficient time had elapsed for the affair to blow over, they despatched a party to discover the state of the poll. Their indignation and surprise were great on being put in prison. The change of scene gave them opportunity for reflection, and after a short period they were released upon signing papers acknowledging their bad treatment of Bayard and Adams.

More than ever aggrieved, old Schoharie resolved to send a deputation to represent their wrongs to King George. The deputation sailing and in due time presented themselves at the British throne, where they learned that news of their treatment of the King's subjects had already reached his Highness, and they were gratified by a prolonged visit to the Tower, whence issuing, they returned to the place of their adoption and reported themselves. Some of them shortly afterwards, left the valley forever, so disgusted were they with the state of affairs, which it has been seen had arisen entirely from their own stupidity and stubbornness.

Justice was early administered in Schoharie. The first Court was held in a wagon house, which is still in existence; and it was here that Justice Garlock, renowned for his equity and impartiality gave expression to many wise and decidedly original sentences, some of the which have been handed down to posterity. On one occasion the case was exceedingly difficult to decide; it seemed to be six to one, and half a dozen to the other, and the following original decision was announced by the Judge; "Der Blandif and defendur bote hash reght; zo I dezides, and pe dunder, der Knonschtopple moosch bay de koscht."

As early as 1760 schools were established, in which English, German, and Dutch were taught. Though of a decidedly primitive nature, they doubtless laid the foundation of eduction, which has culminated in the existence of the present Academy.

Considerable jealousy existed between the German and Dutch settlers, one reason of this being the difference of their religion views, Germans adhering to the church of Martin Luther, and the Dutch to the Reformed church. In the year 1742, Peter Nicholas Sommer left the city of Hamburgh to become the Lutheran Pastor in Schoharie. In 1750 the first church was erected of stone. In 1796 the present brick church was built, and one cannot help observing the durability of the bricks made of those days. This church has been standing eighty years, and scarcely a brick is chipped. In the foundation are to be seen the old stones out of the first church with the names of its founders and supporters inscribed, also, the corner-stone, with the following inscription:

Johannes Lawyer Diaconus,
Conditor hujusE Colesice Fund,
D 14 Marx, 1750. Consum 1751.

The present minister of the church is Rev. Mr. Heck.

The Dutch Reformed Church was probably organized about the same time as the Lutheran, though it is difficult to state the exact date, as its records have been destroyed by fire. The first building was of wood after the model of the Ducth Church in Albany, and in 1772 a stone building was erected, which combined the protection of a fort with the church. This building is still standing, and looks as it would weather another century and be none the worse for it. Just under the eaves of the roof can be seen a hole made by a cannon ball fired by Sir William Johnson's troops when they attacked the place. The present place of worship is a neat brick building, erected in 1844; it seats about four hundred; the Rev. Mr. Handy is pastor.

The Lutheran Cemetery is very beautifully located, and tastefully laid out; the principal object of interest here is the grave of eight soldiers of the Revolutionary War. The Old Stone Fort Cemetery embrasses seven acres, and here rest the ashes of many of the heroes of the Revolutionary struggle.

The Methodist Church cannot, of course, boast so ancient a lineage as the Lutheran or Reformed Churches. It was organized in 1841; the building will accommodate about three hundred; present pastor, Rev. B. Power.

The Court House was located in Schoharie in 1796, and has since been destroyed by fire twice. The present one was built in 1870. It was a very handsome edifice of dressed limestone, measuring 54 by 57, and having three stories. On the first floor are the offices and a kitchen for cooking for the prisoners confined in the jail. The second is occupied by the Sheriff and family, and on the third floor are the court and jury room a gallery over the latter forming additional room. The building is considered fireproof, and the domes, cornices and pionacles are of galvanized iron. The cost of the whole building was under $30,000. In the rear stands the goal, a substantial stone building.

Slaves were introduced from England in the year 1762. Females were sold for $150 and males for a little more.

The Indians continued to be very friendly to the new settlers till the Revolutionary war, when they were allured by the tempting bribes of the British and took up arms against their old neighbors. Speaking of the Indians, it may be interesting to relate that their mode of courtship as described by J. R. Simms in his " "Schoharie County and Border Wars, New York," to which book the writer is indebted for information about Schoharie. Mr. Simms says, "When Cupid has destroyed the red man's peace of mind, he provides himself with a quantity of corn and seeks the presence of his ruddy squaw. He then commences snapping kernals at the coy maid he wishes to woo. If she snaps them back the contract is considered firmly made. If she does not the lover is led to conclude she "don't take" and leaves her presence somewhat mortified. If matters proceed favorably and a contract is made, she takes off one garter, and after marriage ceremony is performed, he probably takes off the other--if, by the by, she has ever had any one."

The beauties of the Schoharie valley have been so frequently dilated upon that it seems almost needless to recapitulate them, and yet we cannot refrain from touching upon them briefly. From any of the neighboring hills or mountains views of great beauty can be seen. During our visit we drove up Sunnyside Hill and were charmed with the prospect. As one gazes on the view below, indescribable feelings of delight and ecstacy possess him. There is a charming originality of scene in this Schoharie valley which captivates every one. Just at your feet lies old Schoharie, as it is reverently called. There its old churches, its timeworn cemeteries, peoples with the brave who have gone before--its old fort standing out boldly in relief as if resolved to reassert independence as long as one stone stands on another, and raising its head proudly, never forgetful of its ancient service in the days when it held its own against British foe as well as Indian marauder. Following the road to Albany we see Gallupville with its red church, and little settlements dropped here and there, as if to vary the regularity and justify the fertility of the valley.

The view of the Schoharie Valley itself is extremely lovely; on the hill sides you get a charming combination of foliage and variety of scene which rouses the feelings of the most unromantic being. Here you see the almost black foliage of pines, intermingled with the lighter verdure of sapling oaks, maples and all the children of the forest combined in infinite variety as they descend into the vale. Then there is the creek, winding its way in a zigzag course--here wider, there narrow, at one point rapid, at another sluggish, singing its song of ever varying music.

But we pass from these beauties of nature to matters of local and personal interest. With what a keen zest would Dr. Oldknow, the celebrated antiquary of Walker Scott's creation, land in Schoharie; how he would delight to rummage round its old fort, to excavate and dig round all likely sports, to toil away for hours with the hope--aye, and the probability of finding some Indian relic of interest. We could fancy him arm in arm with the old friend of Schoharie, John Gebhard, Esq., or Squire John, as he is familiarly called, arguing some matter of ancient interest, and stating his pros and cons with the earnestness of a man pleading his own on a charge of manslaughter.

Squire John is "the man of Schoharie. He knows the history of everyone and everything, and can be most aptly styled a walking and talking directory of the place. His headquarters are at the Parrott Hotel, and there during the summer months, he is the constant companion of the numerous visitors, their associates in literary pursuits, and their referee in matters of dispute, making himself the agreeable friend of all, especially of the children. His heartiness and jollity of manner, make hime a general favorite, and a stranger is at home with him almost before he has time to scan his countenance and therein read his geniality and benevolence.

The business interests of Schoharie are extensive and well deserving of notice. Foremost stands the Treat Durand's factory and saw mills; the former department is not running now in consequence of the lack of stuff, but the saw and planing mill seems to be turning out a fair share of work. Messrs. H. R. and Z. J. Brown are the proprietors of some large marble works which have been established over thirty years, and keep some fifteen or twenty men in employment, supplying the district for some twenty miles round. There are two carriage factories run by R. N. Stafford, and John Feeck respectively; both of them old established and of first-class reputation. Adjacent to the depot is the foundry of "The Schoharie Valley Machine Co.," manufacturers of Rickart's patent rake. They turned out over 200 rakes last year, and the only trouble now is, that they have more orders than they can execute.

There are two hotels, the "Parrott House" and Wood's Hotel. The Parrott House is well known, and has an established reputation for comfort and convenience in all its appointments. It is conveniently and pleasantly located next to the court house, and standing a little back from the main street. The present propietors are P. & M. P. Dorsch, who study the comfort of their visitors in every conceivable way. There are boarders at present from New York City, Brooklyn, Albany and Texas. Wood's Hotel, which stands just opposite the Parrott House is a well kept house, more particularly patronized by the inhabitants ~~is a well kept house, more particularly patronized by the inhabitants~~ of the place and transient visitors.

The Schoharie County National Bank has its seat here. The President is Mr. F. Krum.

Professionally speaking, Schoharie does well to possess such men as Messrs. Krum and Grant, and S. L. Mayham & Son, lawyers, and Dr. Layman and Dr. John I. Swart, physicians.

Republicanism and Democracy are well represented in Mr. Kromer and Mr. Hunt, editors of "The Union" and "The Schoharie Republican," respectively.

Among the store-keepers should be mentioned O. B. Throop and Son, druggists and hardware men, established in 1800 and in the same family since; De Noyelles and Parrott, druggists and grocerymen; H. W. Ferris, Bradley Smith, I. W. Smith, and Peter S. Clark, grocers and general store keepers, and Farquher and Settle, furniture dealers and cabinet makers.

About a half mile from the court house is a brick yard run by Waterbury and Son, where they turn out a half million bricks annually.

The Schoharie Union Free School and Academy is a fine institution. It was established in 1837. The course of study is extensive, and Principal Solmon Sias gives satisfaction in his management. There are about three hundred students.

There is a public hall owned by W. Shufelt, which will accommodate about three or four hundred, and it is a pleasant room.

The Schoharie flats have always been renowned for their fertility, and it is surprising to observe the variety of crops produced in the valley; everything will grow and luxuriantly too, in the rich clayey loam with an alluvian deposit. Till quite recently there were apple trees still bearing fruit, which were planted by Indians more than a hundred and forty years ago. Spring grain is largely produced, and broom corn is extensively cultivated; dairying is also considerably carried on.

W. L. Michaels has one of the richest farms in the neighborhood, which has been in the family since the reign of Queen Anne, and he holds the original title deed. Mr. Michaels' residence is one of the most beautifully located in the place. The grounds are tastefully laid out, and he has a perfect gem of a flower garden.

Among the prominent mansions of the place should be mentioned Mr. Williams' cashier of the bank, and Mr. Hunts', editor of "The Republican", both of which are elegant houses with beautiful surroundings.

Mr. Freat Durand has a house pleasantly situated on Sunnyside, about a mile and a half from the village. It is made quite continental in its appearance by the cultivation of grape vines on the side of the hill. He has a very fine orchard, containing almost every variety of fruit, and the place is beautifully located for a view of the surrounding country. Near to this house is Mr. J. M. Briggs' residence, adjoining which he has a pear orchard containing some eight thousand trees.

There is a beautiful spring which trickles down into the village from some rocks by the side of the Lutheran Cemetery, and it is a matter of surprise that Schoharie enterprise has not found the means of converting this to general use, as it might be so easily effected.

We found the people of Schoharie very hospitable and friendly. The most marked feature in their character is their pride in their village, and its antiquity and beauty.
